PRINCIPAL'S MESSAGE

No one could deny that education is becoming more and more important with each passing year. But I find it rather paradoxical that with the need for better education increasing, many students and parents reflect an attitude of, what I would call, casual unawareness of how tremendously important education is to young people today.

It is a well-known cliché that anything worth having is worth working for. This cliché is particularly significant when applied to education. But how many of us are aware that we all have a role to play? We must all realize that education is not solely the responsibility of the student. The responsibility must be shared by the student, teacher, parent, and the community as a whole.

To you, the graduates, I offer my sincere congratulations on having completed the first phase of your education. I am sure that if you continue to show the same qualities you have displayed in your years at school you will be a credit to yourselves, your parents, the school, and the community.

To the undergraduates I would leave a little advice. Think seriously about what you want from life, and having decided, let nothing deter you from your goal.

VICE-PRINCIPAL'S MESSAGE

The production of your yearbook has not been an easy task. However, with much hard work on the part of the yearbook staff and with the cooperation of the whole student body, you have succeeded in producing a most impressive symbol of your efforts. To everyone concerned I offer my warmest congratulations.

"Focus" is an example of what can be achieved when people unite their efforts toward a common goal. Let your yearbook be one of your most treasured possessions. In the rough spots of life that lie ahead, with its pictures and comments, it will provide you with a satisfying and consoling reflection on the happiness of earlier years. In addition, it will also be a constant reminder that great achievements are more often the result of cooperation with others than through individual effort.

Your success in life will depend on many things and, not least among these are the lessons, whether directly or indirectly, that you have learned in school. As you, the graduates, enter upon a new phase of your career, carry with you the confidence of your past achievements. Let the lessons of study and hard work be your guide in attaining the higher ideals of your chosen vocation.

To all, much success in your future undertakings.

WALKATHON

In the beginning

Only eleven miles to go, ah.

"What do ya mean, let's go back?"

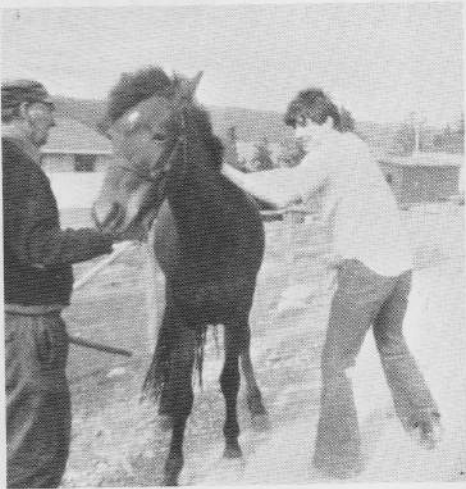

The barefoot feelin'.

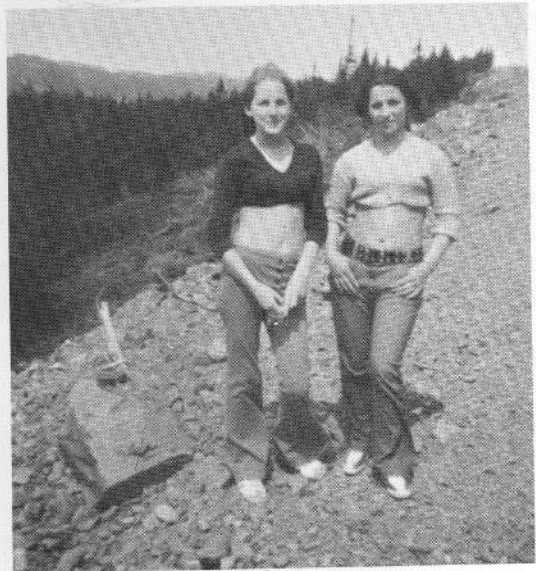

Five minute break.

What's this, a road block?

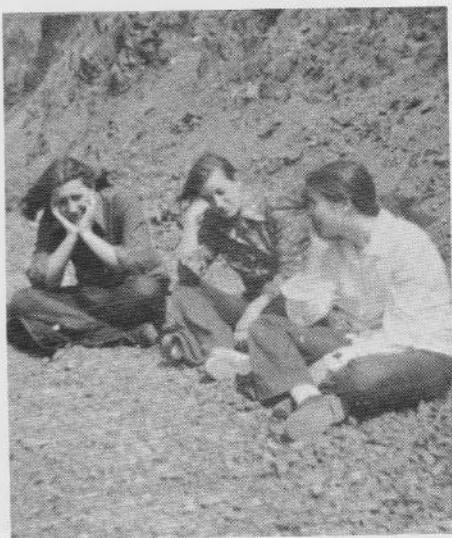

Hitchin' a ride.

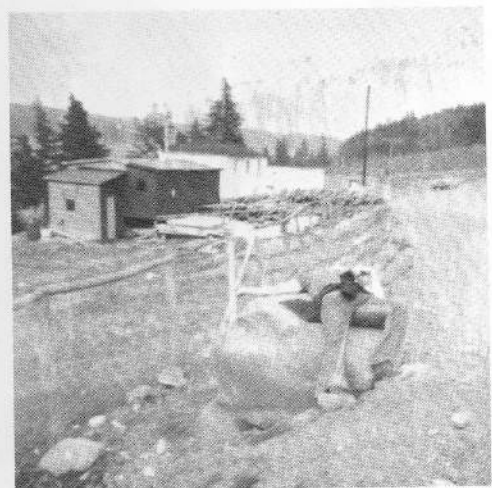

It's hotter than you think.

It's not fair;
they've got a car.

"I'm not walking another step. "

In the end . . .
