PRINCIPAL'S MESSAGE

In our society the child needs three accomplishments as he passes from infancy to responsible adulthood. First he needs certain tools. He needs to be able to read; to employ numbers effectively; and to write. Second he needs to master the technique of facing and solving his own problems, of learning how to deal with his own conflicts. Third he needs the feel of mastery, so that as he comes to adulthood, he will have the spiritual drive to face the world of personal and social problems in a capable fashion. These accomplishments are essential if he is to become a productive, well-adjusted member of society.

The educational processes that will fulfill these needs involve the total learning experiences of the child. The school environment is only one of these processes. The home and community also play a vital role. It is, therefore, essential to the child's development that the home and community share with the school the responsibility of preparing our children to achieve their full potential.

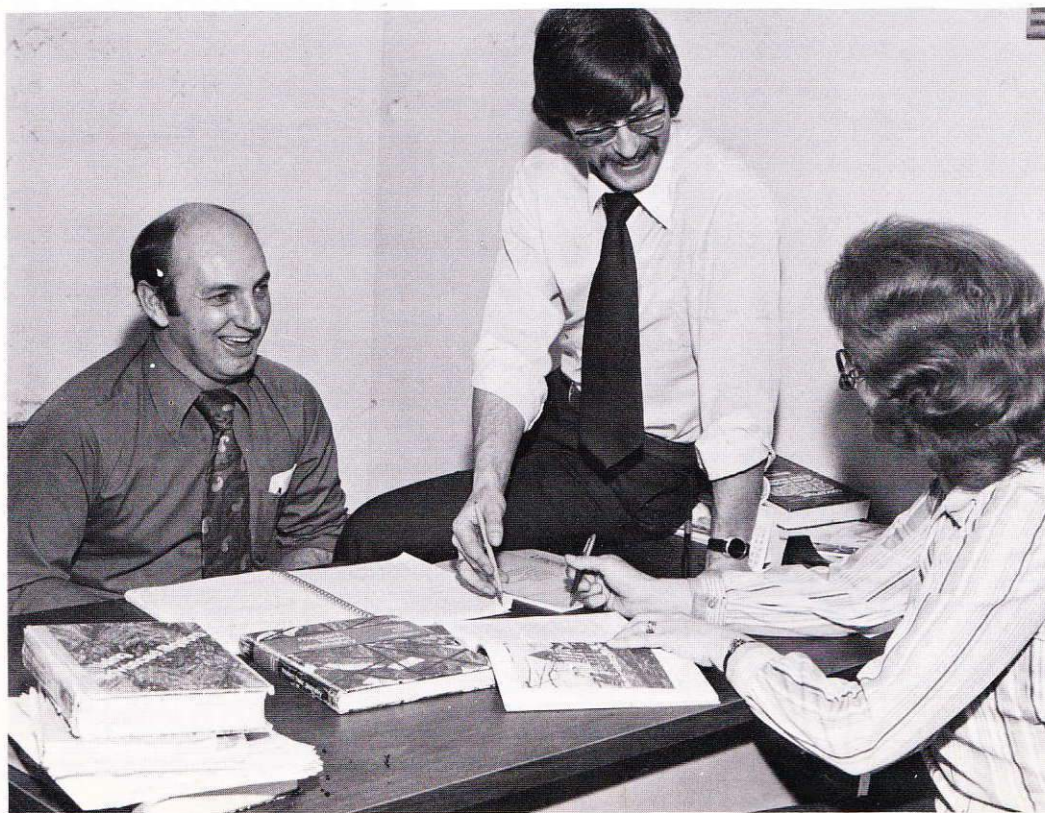

To the graduating class, and all our students, my best wishes for a very successful and happy life.

Bill Russell

Nick Larson glanced around the corner of the pool hall. He took a look at his watch which showed that it was 12:30 P.M. He had told his mother he would be home by one o'clock and she would be suspicious if he was late. His house was five blocks away.

As he stood there his mind flashed back over the events of the day. He was new in Detroit but not new in the ghetto. He had gone to the headquarters of the Bloods, one of the main street gangs in downtown Detroit, and asked if he could join the gang. The purpose for this was for protection from other gangs. They said he could join but he had to take an invitation test. He had to go into Dragon territory, a rival gang, and paint on the sides of their headquarters, "Dragons is Pigs".

He had finished the test and was on the way back home. He now stood by the pool hall wondering what the next move would be. Then he saw a red Corvette and recognized it as a Dragon car because of the flame on the door. He knew they had spotted him and he had to make his move. He saw an alley across the street and made a dart for it. He ducked behind a garbage can and waited in anticipation.

Seconds later the glare of the headlights illuminated the alley and the car stopped about ten feet from him. About six boys his own age piled out of the car. Their voices were loud and filled with rage. He scanned the alley for an escape but found the only way out was over a ten foot high fence about twenty feet away. He would have to try it. He dashed from behind the garbage can but was brought down quickly by a husky boy with a flying tackle. He was dragged to his feet and they formed a semi-circle around him.

Each boy had a "conventional weapon" as they call it in gang warfare. One boy had a lead pipe, the husky boy, who seemed to be the leader, held a chain, another a broken piece of two by four, a skinny boy with sun glasses, produced a switch blade, and two other boys were fixing brass knuckles to their hands. Each boy gave Nick a blank stare.

Then the skinny boy with the sun glasses spoke out. "Nigger boy" he said, "You done messed up our headquarters." Then he slashed at him with the knife. Nick jumped back but not in time. The boy slit his tee-shirt and a thin line of blood appeared on his chest. Nick retaliated by kicking viciously at the boy's hand. The knife flew out of his hand and he fell, cursing, to the pavement. Nick lunged for the knife but was stopped short of his goal by a piece of two by four in the stomach. He doubled up in pain. He looked up in time to see a boy approaching him with a chain swinging above his head. Nick dived for his hand but the boy sidestepped him neatly and as Nick was falling he lashed the chain around his neck. Nick tore savagely at his neck trying to unloose the chain. Finally he had the chain loose but by now they had pinned him against the fence. The boys with the brass knuckles took turns punching him until his face looked like a lump of chopped liver. Then everything started to spin and they let him go. Nick fell to the ground. As Nick blacked out one boy yelled, "Take that Nigger!"

When he came to he was in a bed. One look around showed it wasn't his own room but a hospital room. Someone must have found him. His eyes burned and his throat felt dry. He tried to move but his body ached and his face felt tight from so many stitches. He fell back to his pillow in pain. CONT'D

He was alone and he had time to think. He was finally a member of the Bloods and he was proud of it. The next time he was in an alley it would be his turn to say, "Take that White Boy!"

THE NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTION

As I walk along the San Amonica beach, my thoughts run through the previous years events. Last January 1st if I knew then what the year would bring forth I wouldn't have probably lived through it. Its now December 31st, 1962 and another year will soon come and to most the previous year will soon be forgotten. For me the new year will surely come but the destructiveness of the past year will take up a particular space in my mind.

The year of "62" brought forth many problems for me and my family. Early in the year my father became really sick. He had the frightening disease of Cancer. We had no hope left, but one day a miracle appeared unto him and he was cured. We can't explained what cured my Dad but we were so happy we didn't try.

We weren't hardly over the shock of Dad when my two brothers had a boating accident. They would have drowned only there was a boat near, saw them, and picked them up.

After this Mom had to go into the hospital for treatment, her nerves were down. It was then that Dad suggested that we take an holiday. We were all for it. We were going to Germany where my grandfather lived.

The day before the trip, I went up to the old house looking for things to take on my trip. I noticed my old camera lying in an old trunk and ran for it. As I did I stepped on a board with a rusty nail in it. Of course I had to go in to the doctor because the nail was in far and it was rusty. The doctor told me some startling news. He said I had to stay in the hospital for a few days and then, I wouldn't be able to walk on it for a couple of weeks I was shocked and disappointed at the same time. Mom and Dad were all there for cancelling the trip but not me. I knew that it would be a month or more before we could make the trip and I knew by then, that they would have changed their minds. This was the first time in a long time that I saw them excited and happy about something and I wasn't going to be the one to ruin it. I was eighteen and old enough to take care of myself for a couple of weeks. I finally convinced them to go and enjoy themselves. It wasn't an easy task

The next morning a dull and cloudy day they came to say good-bye to me, on their way to the airport. I assured them that everything was okay and I felt proud of myself for accepting the responsibilities and disappointments of life and thinking for once of someone else.

They left nine o'clock for Germany. The weather wasn't that good for flying. Their was a storm forecasted and their were clouds in the sky. I was looking out the hospital window and thinking about the situation. I was a little worried about the weather, but I eased my mind by assuring myself that the pilots knew more about it than I did. How easily I was fooled.....

I was lying in the hospital bed thinking of our problems that we had encountered so far that year and wondering how we ever survived it. I know now that we wouldn't have only for the guideness of our parents and the love we shared for each other.

My thoughts were interrupted when my favorite nurse entered the room. I knew there was something wrong as soon as she came in. Her face was a deadly white and she didn't wear the familiar smile. There was a sinister feeling about her as soon as she approached me.

She very gently and smpathetically told me what happened. The plane Mom, Dad, and my two brothers were on crashed somewhere out in the Atlantic. There were no survivors. The remark stabbed like a razor in my mind. There, Was, NO SURVIVORS.....

The doctors must have give me something to help me sleep. I woke up the next morning with the tragedy still fresh in my mind. I would stare off into space for hours not believing it really happened. I wouldn't care if the days would come or not. I didn't want to face life. What was LIFE now with out my family. The only thing I ever cared for, the only thing I ever loved was gone, (my family). You don't know how much you really loved them until hey're gone and then, their not there for you to tell. At that point my life was meaningless and many times I wished I was killed along with them.

The weather was the cause of the crash. A storm came up quickly over the Atlantic Ocean. Their was no way of surviving in that kind of weather.

Time passed and a new year will soon come. I don't know how I got through those months following my families death. Their is not one minute of the day without I don't think about them. They're always in my mind. I just go from day to day now.

The time is New Year's Eve and I feel lonely. I've been thinking of what happened all day. I dwelth on the past too much already. It didn't do me any good. I can't change it.

My New Year's Resoulution is to forget about the past and concentrate on the future. Try to build a future for my self and be happy. That is what my family would have wanted.

My thought was interrupted by a cool breeze blowing off the water. I starred up the hill toward my house and I heard the church bells ringing. They were ringing in the New Year and a new hope, filled my mind.
